

HAPPY CAMPER

"getting to where life is good"

*As Seen on TheLongLongHoneymoon.com - an RV Blog
May 14, 2008*

Visit the website and search on "Happy Camper" to watch the video review and read the entire blog entry.

Happy Camper Wine Review

Enter Happy Camper — the first wine brand I've seen that caters to the RV/camping market. The name is brilliant, instantly memorable. The label is its equal, boasting an Airstream-like travel trailer, an aluminum-skinned towable nested somewhere amongst the California redwood trees. On the bottle neck sleeve are camping scenes of (hopefully sober) people canoeing, bicycling, and even piloting a motorboat. How can an RV enthusiast not remember a brand like Happy Camper?

Then there's the wine. As I state in the video review, Happy Camper is a good wine. I daresay that if it were served in your glass at a fancy steak and lobster dinner (the kind with those exquisitely delicate chocolate souffles) you wouldn't skip a beat. Happy Camper may draw you in with the label, but what's inside the bottle will keep you coming back.

www.happycamperwines.com